FORTY YEARS BEFORE THE PUBLIC. DR. C. MCLANE'S CELEBRATED _ LIVERPILLS

FOR THE CURE OF Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint, DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver. DAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy station in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, afterdeath, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER. DR. C. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of asimple purgative they are unequaled.

FORGIVE ME? NO, NEVER.

Well, Dominie, thank you for comin'—
They told you, I 'spose, I was wild'
When I found that a store-keepin' fellar
Had just run away with my child;
My baby, my motherless Nancy—
She's a baby, you see, to me now,
And to think she would cheat her old father!
"When was it?" you ask me, "and how?"
Well, long about hayin' she told me—
Her apron half o'er her cheek—
That a lad from the town came a courtin'.
"Might she see him?" I tried not to speak,
But i couldn't keep still find I told her
I'd shoct him as quick as a hound
If he ever come near her to court her
When me and my guu was around.
She looked kind o' pitiful at me;
"Oh! father, I've promised," she said,
And left me. Along through the orchard
I saw the bent-down yaller head—
I saw her go wanderin' further—
I knew well enough where she went,
For her mother lies buried off yonder—
The way that her footsteps were bent.
An'she come when the dew was a fallin',
A-past me, with never a word;
But out at her own 'little window
A pitiful sobbin' I heard.

Well, after that, all through the summer,
She seemed sort o' solemn and shy.
She said nothin' more of her lover,
And nothin' about him said I.
Last night when the milkin' was over,
An' I sat by the stoop all alone,
Little Nancy came soft y beside me,
And took my old hand in her own.
Her face was as red as the roses,
I know how she tried to confess
That her mind was mane up to the weddin',
But she hådn't the courage, I guess.
Well, sir, when I called in the mornin',
No sleepy "Yes, father," I heard;
I opened the door of her chamber,
And pillow and blanket wa'n't stirred.
All her poor little duds she had taken—
There wa'n't such a wooderful sight—
And a shabhy and faded old pictut'
Of me and her mother in white.
She left me this scrap of paper;
She's married by this time you see.
"You mavried her?" Well, sir, how dare you
Come over here talkin'to me?
"Forgive her?" No never! no never!
"She wants me to bless her?" the jade!
"She is waitin' out yonder?" No naster,
She is waitin' out yonder?" No naster,
She is waitin' out yonder?" No naster,
She must lie in the bed she has made.

Fetter thine arms, and eat thy heart away, Turn back and look upon the solemn Past;
Think thou what all bath been what all shall be.
Those pale gray bues of our Mortality
Are joys that faded, woes that could not last.

Stand thou on Memory's peak at set of Day.
And in the dusky air, 'twixt Noem and Night,
Which is the funeral torch, and which the light
That goes before the bridal, canst thou say?

As mountains with their pinnacles of ice,
As barren craps lit with the flame of Even,
Look beautiful, and stars come forth in Heaven
When day no longer dazzles in the skies;

As unseen violets yield their rares balm.
As trumpet notes wax sweet upon the wind,
As lovely colors fleat before the blind,
As terrent waters from afar look calm;

In this celumn in the Tribune of March 3, a summary was given of Prof. Proctor's arguments assigning a great depth to the atmosphere of the major planets. Among the evidences adduced t was mentioned that a satellite occul ted by the edge of one of these planets has reappeared brieffly just after concealment. Quite recently a remarkable addition has been made to this class of evidence. Mr. Todd and his assistant, Mr. Ringwood, using an eight-inch telescope in the observatory at Adelaide, Austraha, have separately and more than once bserved that a satellite of Jupiter, after passing behind the edge of the planet's disk, was distinctly visible being viewed through the planet for about two minutes Nanking writes home that he knows one before being finally concealed. The verof them, who has been a missionary in | tical depth within the apparent edge of that country twelve years, and who the planet at which the satellite was speaks the language remarkably well, seen can not be estimated at less than whose whole expenses for a month- 2,000 miles. It seems likely that the PRESIDENT ELIOT, of Harvard, has a 7,000 miles deep; some estimates exceed even these figures. A notion of such an atmosphere is given by the statement that a globe of the size of this earth, resting on the true surface of Jupiter would be covered and concealed by the outlying clouds of that planet .- N.
